

ATD Selects LifeNet Health for Excellence in Practice Award Recognition

June 03, 2025 (Virginia Beach, VA) – During its 2025 International Conference & Exposition in Washington DC, the Association for Talent Development recognized organizations and individuals for their excellence in talent development at an awards ceremony on Monday, May 19. ATD honored LifeNet Health with an Excellence in Practice Award for its practice in the Talent Development category.

“ATD award winners reflect a deep commitment to the value of developing people in the workplace. Winning organizations demonstrate how aligning talent development to business needs can increase the performance and success of organizations worldwide,” said Tony Bingham, ATD President and CEO. “These winners’ accomplishments advance knowledge in the talent development profession and contribute to increasing workforce capability and organizational competitiveness.”

Forty-nine practices from thirty-nine companies were recognized with a 2025 Excellence in Practice Award. The awards honor companies for results achieved using practices and solutions from across the scope of talent development. Awards are presented to practices that have demonstrated clear and measurable results of achieving organizational goals, meet a demonstrated need, have appropriate design values, and are clearly aligned with other performance improvement initiatives. These practices have long-term, sustained results.

Practice categories include career development, change management, coaching and mentoring, customer service training, diversity and inclusion, integrated talent management, leadership/management development, learning and development, learning technologies, managing the learning function, onboarding, performance consulting/performance improvement, and sales enablement.
